

clutch release forks from febi bilstein – the all-in-one solution “Made in Germany”

As the part of the clutch responsible for separate power transmission between motor and gearbox, the release fork is under frequent stress, making it particularly prone to wear.

Quality is paramount for such a heavily used part. Premature defect involves a risk of high consequential costs, as the vehicle is no longer fit for service. Moreover, the gearbox needs to be removed to replace the clutch release fork – which involves a lot of time and money.

febi bilstein offers the replacement part in OE matching quality and “Made in Germany”:

- The clutch release fork is manufactured by our own engineering division in Ennepetal, meeting the highest demands in terms of precision and installation safety.
- All functional dimensions are guaranteed by in-house production, processing and quality assurance.
- Additional material and structure tests guarantee total security in casting material selection.

Another benefit: The OE fork and repair kit need to be ordered separately, and then assembled. With febi bilstein, you receive the clutch release fork 47813 fully pre-assembled as a complete repair solution. Since you only need one febi reference, you can save time and money.
